Curriculum Delivery:

A well-defined approach addressing the finer aspects of teaching-learning practice is regularly developed through continuous learning and training by all the faculty members. This takes the form of strictly following time schedules, reports and records, assessments and evaluation, and parallelly giving importance to ICT teaching-learning through online/offline mode using various platforms.

At NHC, learner-centric integrated learning methods are employed that enable the students to come forward and lead the classes. Images show students actively leading the learning process through discussions, presentations, and collaborative learning.
