About the session / Event:

The session started with the inauguration of the event. The participants and judges were welcomed. The event began with a cheerful speech from our speaker, which warmed the hearts of the participants and motivated them to take part in the cooking-without-fire competition. The participants were reminded of the rules and regulations, cooking time, presentation setup in their stalls, and the duration allotted for the sale. The participants showed great energy and passion to cook something unique that required no fire but creativity to come up with new dishes.

The event went flawlessly and proceeded smoothly. All the participants enjoyed being there, cooking something unique that no one expected. The highlighted dishes included chocolate modak, sandwiches, mojitos, tacos, buttermilk, etc. The event was not limited to cooking alone, as the students were also engaged in selling the dishes. The judges then moved on to tasting and scoring the dishes prepared by the participants. At the closure of the event, awards were given to the best three dishes that were well presented and also earned some minimum profit. The event ended with big smiles on everyone's face—whether they won or not, it was the smile of satisfaction that made all the coordinators happy.

Outcome of the session: This event was guided by the faculty coordinator as a part of innovative teaching best practices. It helped the students learn how to organize an event and understand the learning involved in the entire procedure. It was an event that brought out many

innovative ideas to cook unique dishes without fire. EVENT PHOTOS
